Louisville Tobacco Market.

REPORTED EXPRESSLY FOR THE ROUNDABOUT BY GLOVER, OF ANTIOCH, LOUISVILLE, KY.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Nov. 19, 1884. Sales for one week to date 955 hogheads. Since last 1st of Jan. 70,350 hogheads. 1,070 hogheads new crop sold to date. Tobacco of all types, both old and new, has been firmer for the past week. The new dark tobacco that is selling now is commanding good figures. The quality of the new offerings in the market is inferior. The prices for new burley range about as follows: Trash $4.25 to $4.75; lugs $4.50 to $6.50; common leaf $6.50 to $7.50; medium leaf $7.75 to $9; good leaf $10 to $13.25.

Mr. McAuley's return to this city, where last season he secured so strong a hold on the affections of our theatregoers, was the occasion of calling together at the Arch Street Theatre last evening an excellent audience, both as regards numbers and quality. From the moment honest, cherry, stout-hearted Uncle Don's, in his fur cap and homespun garments, with his cravat bag in hand, came upon the stage, until the falling of the curtain, he had the warm sympathy of his audience with him. This was frequently manifested by the most earnest signs of approval, and it is safe to say when the house was dismissed a more delighted audience has not filled out of the doors of the Arch since then. Mr. McAuley's personation of the character of the old deputy has lost none of its former racy flavor of the soil, none of that quaintness, drollness, and quiet pathos which so quickly touch the heart of the looker-on. And in his honest and fearless indignation in dealing with the rascals at Keppeler's bar-room, his acting was even more thrilling and startling. He has added many strong points to his personation, and it now stands before the public as one of the most original and best-shaped conceptions of American character in rural life that have yet been created.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

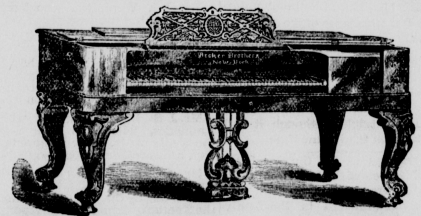

Will appear at the Opera House Wednesday, Nov. 20th.
